MAYOR'S COURT

Mayor Smith has made a start as the city's chief magistrate which encourages the lovers of law and order and justifies the prediction made by his friends before his election that he would make a real, live, strenuous mayor.

In court Monday morning he dispensed justice in a manner that indicates a firm determination to make the law supreme.

Last Sunday the police officer who presided over the peace and dignity of the negro suburb known as Waycross had a bunch of trouble with three of President Roosevelt's wards, known as Nathaniel McMillan, Oliver Blocker, and Eugene Walsstein.

McMillan was drunk, notwithstanding the fact that this is a "dry town." He went on the war path and undertook to thrash his friend Blocker. Blocker was opposed to it, and fought back. They created such an unusual disturbance that the high society of Waycross turned out in large numbers, blocking its fashionable thoroughfare.

McMillan swore like a sailor, and his antagonist fought like a trooper. The officer stopped the fight and undertook to arrest the offenders.

Then Walsstein appeared on the scene. Walsstein is a power in Waycross affairs. Ordinarily, he is a pole-climber for the Telephone Company. But in darkness he is an oracle—a sort of Hagen Truhnaul, and from his decisions there is no appeal without trouble.

Walsstein decided that the policeman didn't know his duty and was altogether too fresh. The policeman, knowing the power and influence of the great tribune, called the arrests off, temporarily, and came into the city for Marshal Zuber.

Marshal Zuber hastened to the scene, but Walsstein and Blocker had vanished. McMillan was too drunk to get away, and the Marshal, with the aid of his dog, his log club and the policeman, landed him in the Bridge Tower.

Monday morning the officers succeeded in rounding up Blocker and Walsstein. In the police court, Mayor Smith fined McMillan $10 and cost, and Blocker $1 and cost. Walsstein, who was charged with interfering with an officer while in the charge of his duty, was arraigned separately. The Mayor did not pass upon the case, but left the charge open on the docket, subject to the good behavior of the defendant.

The Mayor told Walsstein that for the present he could go and continue his vocation as pole-climber, but his office as Attorney General of Waycross was at an end, that the next time he bothered into the duties of the police he would be sent to the County Criminal Court.

CITY COUNCIL MEETING

The City Council met in regular session Monday night. Alderman E. G. Harris presided, and Messrs. Atwood, Stevens, Foster, Smith and Porter were present.

Mayor Charles L. Smith was present for the first time since his election. He addressed the Council briefly, making what might be properly be termed his inaugural address.

He spoke of the progress of the city in the past, its prospects for future growth, and outlined the public improvements he deemed necessary at present, and suggested a liberal and progressive policy which he desired to see inaugurated, and which he trusted the Council would approve and assist him in carrying out.

It was wise, conservative, progressive, and none too liberal for the prosperous outlook of the city.

Bills for street improvements aggregating $798 were presented, approved and ordered to be paid.

The Mayor, who was authorized at the last Council meeting to make an amicable settlement of the grievances existing between the city and J. E. Rush relative to certain tax assessments and rights of way for street extensions through a lot of land owned by Mr. Rush, reported that he had not been able to agree with Mr. Rush. He was authorized to continue the negotiations upon a basis suggested by the Mayor.

Mayor Smith was authorized to appoint sanitary inspectors to enforce the new sanitary ordinance which goes into effect July 8th.

J. W. Wilkinson, Clerk of the Council, was instructed to correspond with the State Board of Health, and other authorities on sanitation, and ascertain what it will cost to secure the service of a first-class expert sanitary engineer to estimate the cost and make plans for a thorough system of sewerage and water works for the city of Daytona.

Dr. George E. Walton appeared before the Council with some practical suggestions on sanitation. He urged that no more permits be granted to open sewers into the Halifax river in front of the city, unless they be extended to the deep water channel. He read an interesting paper on gonorrhea.

KILLED POOR BRUI

A Williamson, W. T. Lindsay and John Roberts, all well-known hunters, fishers and trappers, living in the northwestern section of the city, killed a bear weighing about 250 pounds late Tuesday afternoon, out on the Volusia road one and a half miles from the city.

A man living in the country came into the city and told Roberts that he had a bear on the road about a mile from town. That was enough to start Roberts on a bear hunt. He notified Williamson and Lindsay, and the trio, with nine hounds, were soon on poor bruin's trail.

They ran him to bay just before dark on a thicket on the Wilmington place. Williamson and Lindsay fired at the bear at the same instant, killing him almost instantly. But they are not sure which one fired the fatal shot.

City Marshal Zuber says that Lindsay killed the bear, and when asked how he knew that it was Lindsay, replied:

"Because he had my bear gun, and it never fails to kill. I have killed twenty a bear with that gun, and never missed a single shot."

Lindsay, Roberts and Zuber have a northern pack of 25 hounds.

MR. WILLIAMSON PLEASED

J. F. Williamson, a prominent citizen of Ocala who has taken a cottage for the summer over at Seabreeze, appears to be having a delightful time, selling the salt and making a record as a fisherman. Here is a brief extract from a letter Mr. Williamson has recently written to his friend Frank Harris, the popular editor of the Ocala Banner:

"We landed all right, and find the beach from off old ocean just simply grand and refreshing. We have only been here two days, and I feel almost like a new man. Father Martin and I went fishing yesterday and had fine luck. We caught some thirty or so nice ones. We are having fine weather just now, and it continues in a few days there will be a cottage for rent."

The Bond Lumber Co. has purchased 62,000 acres of timber lands near Ocala, and are preparing to erect a large saw mill at that place.

THE GREAT EAST COAST

Arthur S. Morton, in a letter to the Manufacturers Record, has this to say of the East Coast section:

"When Mr. Flagler came to Florida in the eighties the East Coast of the State, with a water front of over 400 miles, was but little known to the commercial world, and for the most part lay in endless stretches of forests and wild lands, while in the southernmost portions few other than Indians roamed the forests or waded the slush of the everglades."

"St. Augustine, an old Spanish town of antiquities and a Mecca for the relic hunters, was the first object of Mr. Flagler's attention. To attract the winter tourists to St. Augustine, and keep them through the season, he proceeded to build a new town just outside the old one. In the fulfillment of this enterprise rose the famous Ponce de Leon, a hotel of concrete without joint or break, a casting as with a mold, the most remarkable as it was the most elegant hotel of its day."

"The narrow gauge railway to Jacksonville was broadened to the standard, and the branch line to Palatka was purchased. This gave Mr. Flagler an unbroken line to that point, from which he continued south through an almost uninhabited and totally undeveloped country to Ormond, where another large winter resort hotel was built, and near which a village and other hotels soon sprang into busy existence."

"Daytona was next reached by the onward movement of the road. This little city is now generally regarded as the most beautiful resort city in the whole South. It has beautifully paved streets and broad avenues, shaded with water oaks and palmetto trees, and many well-appointed hotels."

"At Rockledge the road building stopped temporarily, while Mr. Flagler halted to look about him and make plans for the future. It was believed that here that mysterious zone called 'The Frost Line' had been safely passed. But experience soon proved the contrary, and Mr. Flagler determined to build further down the peninsula."

"He had heard of the beauties of Lake Worth, of the Gulf Stream that washed the Atlantic shores near there, and of the perpetual summer its warm waters insured. To explore this wonderful southland he ordered an expedition, which in small boats set out for the cruise along the course of the famous Indian river."

"In his letter, which is very long and interesting, Mr. Morton follows the great scheme of development all along the East Coast down to Palm Beach and Miami, giving this section one of the best and most graphic advertisements it has ever had—a boost that will tell."

A Well Known Music House.

The many friends of Mr. J. Mortimer Smith of the Florida Music House of Laddenden Campbell Smith Co. will be glad to learn that he is again in town, having returned from his vacation made necessary by his recent severe illness. Mr. Smith expresses the highest appreciation of the many kindnesses shown him by his friends here during his illness.

Mr. Smith has sold some very fine pianos here and is about placing several others. It may not be generally known that the well known music business established by Messrs. Laddenden & Bates at Savannah, Ga., has passed into the hands of northern capitalists, and that Messrs. Wm. Laddenden, J. A. Bates and Jasper Smith, the originators and former owners of the Laddenden & Bates concern, having associated themselves with Mr. H. B. Campbell, the master of the Florida piano trade, have no connection with any other concern in the states of Georgia and Florida except the Laddenden Campbell Smith Co., of Jacksonville, Fla. All the old friends of Messrs. Laddenden, Bates, Campbell and Smith should bear the above facts in mind.

Mr. J. Mortimer Smith expects to be here frequently—adv.

MARRIED IN KINGSTON

Harriet Hull and Miss Ella Winghamham were married Tuesday night at the residence of bride's mother, Mrs. George Winghamham, in Kingston.

Rev. J. P. Graham, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony, and Miss Charlotte Ghall was bridesmaid. A large gathering of the special friends of the couple were present.

About 12 o'clock that night the happy couple were given a tin-pan scramble by their music-loving friends, in which no works played a noisy part.

HAPPENINGS AT KINGSTON

C. D. Smiley is having a two-inch well put down on his lot.

C. A. Winghamham is moving his house to the center of his lot.

Mrs. M. J. Davis has been on the sick list this week, but is some better.

J. R. Cole has just tapped a barrel of good Florida syrup. Bring on your jugs.

A baby girl arrived to gladden the home of Mr. and A. J. Knight Thursday night.

There have been three houses built in Kingston during the last two months and more in view. Let the good work go on.

Wm. Ruth has moved from Barberville to Kingston and is located on the Parks place. Mr. Ruth wholesales feed to the Daytona shops.

Married, at the home of the bride's mother, Main street, Kingston, Wm. Ella Winghamham to Homer Hull. By J. P. Graham, performed the ceremony after which cream and cake were served. We extend congratulations.

T. L. Rodgers, county commissioner for this district, is preparing to continue the work on Ridgewood avenue running north from the city limits of Daytona. Good roads are the best advertisement for Volusia county that we can have.

We have had an idea for some time that this was a good place to raise babies and our views were strengthened when we learned that Will Day found twins at his house a few days ago. They are all getting along fine, especially Will.

W. T. Lindsay killed a fine bear, Tuesday between here and the scrub along the Volusia road. Will had quite an exciting time for awhile. The bear tried to catch him three times before he got a chance to shoot it. It was his first, so you can guess what a time he had. We think he will get over it.
